Lusophone Countries in the 21st Century, Khalili Lecture Theatre, SOAS

This multi-disciplinary panel of experts will discuss the international challenges and opportunities for Portuguese-speaking countries in Africa, Europe and the Americas countries in the 21st century. The invited speakers will also debate how international relations in the 21st century are intended to benefit and “develop” the needs and capacities of the “South” which have consistently been ignored.

This panel of experts comes together to discuss the challenges and opportunities for Lusophone countries in the 21st century.

The speakers will cover a range of topics including the historic and cultural Atlantic connections between these countries, current issues of international security and the emerging economic powers of Lusophone states.

They will also explore current and future opportunities for co-operation between these states in the face of challenges such as poverty, security and climate change.

Speakers include

H.E. Mr Miguel Gaspar Fernandes Neto, Ambassador of the Republic of Angola in the UK, Dr Toby Green (KCL) & Dr Chris Alden (LSE)

AAAM Annual Conference “Partnerships and Collaboration in the Digital Age”, Birmingham, Alabama

The Association of African American Museums invites proposals for presentation at its annual conference to be held August 6-9, 2014, in Birmingham, Alabama, hosted by the Birmingham Civil Rights Institute. Most partnerships and collaborations are organized around creating a particular activity or program.

In some instances, partners come together around issues beneficial to both parties while others aim to impact communities in a positive and relevant way.

Yet whatever the types of organizations, partnerships or collaborations involved, all participants seek to broaden and deepen their audiences' experiences.

The collaborative effort employs engaging people such as creators of culture and art, curators, administrators, audience members, donors, elected officials and volunteers.

Most importantly in the case of partnerships, it also includes ways in which organizations strengthen their own capacity to create and provide cultural services while preserving artifacts and traditions, all of which leads to achieving higher levels of sustainability.

Organizations created out of different cultural forms and themes that come together for specific reasons result in new relationships that help those organizations expand and extend their programming. The Association of African American Museums invites your organization to promote its products and services at the Annual Conference as an exhibitor, sponsor or as an advertiser.

Slavery, Memory and Citizenship – 2014 Summer Institute, Mexico City

The Harriet Tubman Institute research project “Slavery, Memory and Citizenship” which is supported by the Social Science Research Council and Humanities (SSHRC) of Canada, and the National Institute of Anthropology and History (INAH), through the National Coordination of Anthropology and the National Programme for Research and Afrodescendant Cultural Diversity invite papers to participate in the 5th Summer Institute.

The theme center will focus on analyzing and reflecting on the connections between the experiences and legacies of slavery (both historic and contemporary forms), the ways in which the institution is remembered and its implications for claims for complete citizenship. The reflections will center the interplay between history and memory and its manifestations in contemporary society, and examine the ways in which experiences of slavery are recalled and used to determine present day ascriptions of status .

The 2014 Summer Institute will be held at the National Coordination of Anthropology of the National Institute of Anthropology and History in Mexico City. For one week, research specialists will offer master classes, and graduate and post-graduate students will present the results of their research. Registration deadline is Friday, June 20, 2014.

III Conferência Internacional “Dinâmicas sociais em África: rupturas e continuidades” UEM, Maputo

Durante séculos, a África foi falaciosamente vista como um continente sem história e criatividade. hic sunt leones: aí existem leões! Assim se representava o continente em mapas e portulanos. Com as independências nacionais, o novo quadro epistemológico alterou a anterior visão: a África tem história e criatividade.

Por outras palavras, ao sinal negativo externo foi oposto o sinal positivo local, lá onde se defendia o afropessimismo opôs-se o afro-optimismo, numa polarização na qual a pesquisa dialéctica e os juízos de facto foram e são, frequentemente, substituídos pela pesquisa politicamente conveniente e pelos juízos de valor. Esta pesquisa politicamente conveniente integra, hoje, o discurso, também conveniente, da riqueza africana em recursos naturais, especialmente minerais e energéticos, que aparecem como substitutos dos “leões” de outrora.

É imperioso romper com essa dicotomia normativa e olhar para o continente africano numa perspectiva adaptada à “lei de Heráclito”: a única coisa que não muda em África é a mudança. Na verdade, África sofreu e sofre influências e pressões, determinantes no passado e no presente. Que dinâmicas estão em curso? Que riscos sociais e ambientais prever? Que desafios ter em conta? Que políticas e estratégias adoptar? Daí o tema desta III Conferência Internacional, organizada pelo Centro de Estudos Africanos na cidade de Maputo, que se desdobra em 15 subtemas, visando construir um mosaico de vida interligada sobre o continente africano.

GAPSYM8 – 8th Symposium of the Ghent Africa Platform, “Colonial memories at “present - decolonizing Belgium?, Ghent

The objectives of the 8th annual symposium of the Africa Platform are basically twofold: we want to shed light on the current post-colonial situation in Belgium and on the way Belgian society deals with its colonial history; in an attempt to analyze the relation between the colonial past and racism today.

In order to bring these two concerns—history and its present impact—into dialogue, the symposium’s organizers invite a wide range of contributors, from political scientists, jurists, urban planners, physicians, educationists and sociologists to engage in this conference. Although the main focus is on African colonial past and Africans in Belgium, we welcome contributions that take on a comparative perspective and/or consider non-African population groups as well as the post-colonial situation in other contexts.

In short: we invite scholars to submit paper proposals dealing with the topics of colonial memories, colonial past, the impact of colonialism on present day Europe, and racism/discrimination in western society today.

Paper proposals (abstract of maximum 300 words) can be submitted until the 1st of June 2014.

By 1 September the scientific committee will notify which papers have been accepted.

From Revolution to Independence

In July 2011 the Republic of South Sudan achieved independence, concluding what had been Africa's longest running civil war. The process leading to independence was driven by the Sudan Peoples' Liberation Movement, a primarily Southern rebel force and political movement intent on bringing about the reformed unity of the whole Sudan. Through the Comprehensive Peace Agreement of 2005, a six year peace process unfolded in the form of an interim period premised upon 'making unity attractive' for the Sudan. A failed exercise, it culminated in an almost unanimous vote for independence by Southerners in a referendum held in January 2011.

A story of transformation and of victory against the odds, this book reviews South Sudan's modern history as a contested region and assesses the political, social and security dynamics that will shape its immediate future as Africa's newest independent state.

Lusofonia and Its Futures

Lusofonia and Its Futures is a richly textured collection of essays on the Lusophone (Portuguese-speaking) world, which comprises more than 240 million people in eight countries on four continents. The notion of Lusofonia encompasses the cultural identities generated by Portuguese speakers with shared as well as divergent histories. This volume presents a nuanced and critical study of the concept and history of Lusofonia from a variety of theoretical approaches.

In addition to focusing on this theme, Lusofonia and Its Futures includes fiction in translation by writers from several countries in the Lusophone world as well as scholarly essays on such topics as the reception of the English novel in Brazilian literature and of Fernando Pessoa in Brazil. A collection of innovative and insightful essays providing a critical and theoretical reflection on the concept and history of Lusofonia.

Illicit Flows and African Security

In 2013, the Swedish Defence Research Agency (FOI) and the Nordic Africa Institute (NAI) hosted a joint one day African security conference. The theme of the conference was Illicit Flows and African Security, and was held at the Museum of Mediterranean and Near Eastern Antiquities in Stockholm on 17th October 2013. The expectation was that a mixture of researchers and practitioners coming together would be able to share ideas and solutions on how illicit flows can be tackled more effectively.

Finally, the conference to which this report testifies builds on a long standing collaboration between the Swedish Defense Research Agency (the Program of Studies in Africa Security) and the Nordic Africa Institute. In keeping with this objective research cooperation on these issues has continued, and conferences have become key elements in this cooperation. The edited versions of the presentations each convey a personal take on the theme of the joint lectures.

Geometria Sona de Angola. Volume 3: Estudos comparativos

O 3.º volume da trilogia “Geometria Sona de Angola” apresenta uma reflexão sobre tradições doutras épocas e doutras zonas de África e do Mundo, que se assemelham, em certa medida e dum ponto de vista técnica, à tradição dos “sona”. No capítulo 1 analisam-se alguns algoritmos geométricos desenvolvidos no Egipto Antigo. Motivos e padrões-defita-trançada que aparecem em selos carimbados e em outros artefactos da Mesopotâmia Antiga são apresentados no cap. 2.

O cap. 3 dedica-se à análise de desenhos “kolam” dos Tamil no Sul da Índia. Uma breve excursão para outros continentes tem lugar no cap. 4. No último capítulo voltamos a África, apresentando alguns padrões que aparecem bordados em roupa, pintados em paredes, esculpidos em madeira, etc. (Reedição).

South Africa's 'Border War' Contested Narratives and Conflicting Memories

South Africa's 'Border War' provides a timely study of the 'war of words' waged by retired South African Defence Force (SADF) generals and other veterans against critics and detractors.

The book explores the impact of the 'Border War' on South African culture and society during apartheid and in the new dispensation and discusses the lasting legacy or 'afterlife' of the war in great detail. It also offers an appraisal of the secondary literature of the 'Border War', supplemented by archival research, interviews and an analysis of articles, newspaper reports, reviews and blogs.

Adopting a genuinely multidisciplinary approach that borrows from the study of history, literature, visual culture, memory, politics and international relations, South Africa's 'Border War' is an important volume for anyone interested in the study of war and memory or the modern history of South Africa.

Português do Libolo, Angola, e português afro-indígena de Jurussaca, Brasil: cotejando os sistemas de pronominalização

Tendo em conta que escravos que aportaram no Brasil, após permanência no entreposto de São Tomé, eram falantes de L1s do grupo banto, impõe-se o cotejo sincrónico de particularidades de variedades vernaculares quer de São Tomé quer de Angola com o português do Brasil, em geral, e com falas de comunidades quilombolas deste país, em particular, se se pretender entender as especificidades diacrónicas destas últimas.

No presente trabalho, estabelecem-se comparações entre os quadros pronominais do português de Jurussaca, Nordeste do Estado do Pará, Brasil (doravante PJ), e do português do Município do Libolo, Província do Kwanza-Sul, interior de Angola (doravante PLb). A maioria dos informantes do Libolo tem o quimbundo como L1. A nível estrutural, os quadros apresentam tanto similitudes quanto dissemelhanças.

“Significant Others: Security and Suspicion in Chinese–Angolan Encounters”

The sense of mystery around Chinese presences in Angola impels researchers to understand not only the empirical details of economic transactions and diplomatic partnerships but also the various ways in which the actors involved make sense of a novel social, political, and economic configuration.

By drawing several ethnographic portraits of the social practices and discursive strategies at play in Chinese–Angolan relations, I show how, in a context of mutual uncertainty and suspicion, appeals to “security” play a central role. Instead of viewing Chinese and Angolans as two separate groups with opposed interests and lack of communication between them, I explore how participation in a shared context generates common modes of explanation. Moreover, I propose a parallel analysis of state-level negotiations alongside everyday social encounters to consider how a political economic partnership between China and Angola is lived through the everyday negotiations of Chinese and Angolan residents in Luanda.

“When people stay and things make their way: airports, mobilities and materialities of a transnational landscape”

This article explores different meanings of mobility and place by examining the interweaving of people, things and airports in Guinea-Bissau and Portugal. Based on ethnographic fieldwork conducted in two airports – of departure and arrival of this migratory route – I look at the practices of sending and receiving objects by migrants in Lisbon and their kin in Bissau.

The transnational yet grounded setting helps to provide a better understanding of the complexity associated with different forms of mobility – including corporeal, imagined and desired – and their key role in socially and relationally constructing a lived airport space, as well as wider social landscapes. Bringing in evidence from a less-explored setting – a small airport in a West African country – will particularly challenge some of the assumptions that tend to associate mobility with ‘modernity’ and fixity with ‘tradition’.

“A wedge of time: futures in the present and presents without futures in Maputo, Mozambique”

A series of recent anthropological studies on time emphasize the crucial importance of the future as a guiding trope in the present. Although located beyond an immediate temporal horizon, the future is consequently taken as connected to the present in a meaningful way through a sequence of chronological moments and hence potentially accessible. This paper takes its point of departure from the growing body of anthropological work on time and futurity, but challenges the inherent assumption of linearity characterizing the relation between present and future.

Based on fieldwork carried out in Maputo, Mozambique, it examines the non-linear temporalities of house-building. According to house-builders living on the fringes of the city, the future constitutes a temporal position from where the present might be properly illuminated. However, when seen from the present, the future surprisingly seems to reflect its own inevitable collapse, thus making it crucial to maintain appropriate distance between the two.

“Stock-outs of essential health products in Mozambique – longitudinal analyses from 2011 to 2013”

To assess the relationship between health system factors and facility-level EHP stock-outs in Mozambique. Stock-out rates for drugs ranged from 1.3% for oral rehydration solution to 20.5% for Depo-Provera and condoms, with a mean stock-out rate of 9.1%; mean stock-out rates were 15.4% for supplies and 4.1% for equipment. Stock-outs at the district level accounted for 27.1% (29/107) of facility-level drug stock-outs and 44.0% (37/84) of supply stock-outs.

Each 10-km increase in the distance from district distribution warehouses was associated with a 31% (CI: 22–42%), 28% (CI: 17–40%) or 27% (CI: 7–50%) increase in rates of drug, supply or equipment stock-outs, respectively. The number of health facility staff was consistently negatively associated with the occurrence of stock-outs.

“The Multiple Influences on Nonformal Instructional Practices in Rural Mozambique...”

This article presents findings from 12 months of ethnographic observations of nonformal adult education classes offered by an internationally funded nonprofit, referred to in this article as Comunidades de Poder (CDP). The primary objective of this article is to examine the various contextual factors that influenced CDP teachers' instruction and to explore the applicability of world culture theory as a framework that can explain these phenomena.

This article finds that CDP teachers' classroom practice was more heavily influenced by teachers' personal experiences in teacher-centered formal classrooms than by their training in Freirean pedagogy. It also finds that world culture theory has limited applicability in explaining these phenomena, as it fails to account for changes in world culture over time and the role of power in its dissemination.

Ifá in Yorùbá Thought System

Previous scholars of Ifá have conveyed an impression that Ifá is a characteristic social institution with only religious, ethnographical and sociological significance. In fact, Ifá has been greatly misconceived as a mere religious and mythic discourse, devoid of any meaningful philosophical import. There is also the misconception that Ifá is now largely anachronistic.

In Ifá in Yorùbá Thought System, the author shows that an adequate understanding of a text requires a transition from the manifest to the latent meaning and, therefore, analyses the Ifá literary corpus with a view to identifying the aspects of Ifá that are of philosophic relevance. He shows that fundamental philosophical issues, including nature of reality, knowledge, human conduct are embedded in Ifá. With reflective interpretation of an appreciable number of Ifá verses, the author also examines the utilitarian functions of Ifá, offers good insight into important political ideas and values.

Indigenous People in Africa: Contestations, Empowerment and Group Rights

This volume is an attempt to provide this intersectional and reflexive space. The thinking behind the book began in Lamu in mid-2010. It was a time when growing community resistance emerged towards the Kenyan government's plan to build a second seaport under a trans-frontier infrastructural project known as the Lamu Port-South Sudan-Ethiopia Transport Corridor (LAPSSET). The editors agreed that a book that draws community activists, academics, researchers and policy makers into a discussion of the predicament of indigenous rights and development against the backdrop of the Endorois case was timely and needed.

Assembled here are the original contributions of some of the leading contemporary thinkers in the area of indigenous and human rights in Africa. The book is an interdisciplinary effort with the single purpose of thinking through indigenous rights after the Endorois case but it is not a singular laudatory remark on indigenous life in Africa.

If Mayors Ruled Somalia: Beyond the State-building Impasse

This NAI Policy Note, by Ken Menkhaus, proposes more support to municipalities as the source of the most practical, legitimate and effective formal governance in Somalia.

Critically assesses the strengths and weaknesses of two competing school of thoughts on state-building and international aid in Somalia - the "Marshall Plan" approach and the "Social Contract" approach. It also proposes a third option - a transitional strategy that includes more support to municipalities as the source of the most practical, legitimate, and effective formal governance in Somalia.

– Supporting city administrations is not a substitute for state-building at the national and federal level, but can be an important component of a transitional strategy designed to provide Somalis with essential government protection and services during the long process of national-level state-building, says Ken Menkhaus.

CAI 57 | Current Status of Agriculture and Future Challenges in Sudan: Urbanisation and long-lasting civil wars and conflict mean that the demographic pattern in Sudan is changing drastically. Nevertheless, 60%–80 % of Sudanese engage in subsistence agriculture. Agriculture remains a crucial sector in the economy as a major source of rawmaterials, food and foreign exchange. It employs the majority of the labour force, and serves as a potential vehicle for diversifying the economy. However, no rigorous studies have explained productivity in this sector in relation to food security. The situation has worsened because agriculture in particular has been neglected since the advent of oil production in the early 2000s. Moreover, Sudan's agricultural growth has been unbalanced, with the majority of irrigated agriculture concentrated in the Centre and a huge disparity in development indicators between the best- and worst-performing regions.

CAI 58 | Youth and the Labour Market in Liberia– on history, state structures and spheres of informality: This study explores the historical development of the Liberian labor market with a particular focus on young men and women. It asks, what constitutes and shapes the Liberian labour market? By looking at labour mobilization and the structure of the (in)formal labour market – both in peace and war – our understanding of the contemporary Liberian labour market is substantially enhanced. The study finds that there are many recurring patterns of labor migration, labor mobilization and distribution that have existed in the Liberian pre-war, war and post-war settings. Historical structures of informality and patrimonialism continue to dominate Liberia today. In addition to this, the study's focus on youths provides an insight into how this section of society moves through the labour market. It also examines the idea of unemployed youths as particularly prone to violence.

CAI 59 | Resettled for Development. The Case of New Halfa Agricultural Scheme: This CAI discusses the displacement and resettlement of the Sudanese Nubians into the New Halfa agricultural scheme in Eastern Sudan, the current state of this multi-ethnic community and the challenges the farmers are facing. The Nubians of Wadi Halfa in Northern Sudan (also called the Halfawi Nubians) had to be relocated to New Halfa due to the construction of the Aswan High Dam in the early 1960s. In addition to the loss of ancestral land and the alienation they experienced, the Halfawi Nubians struggled to secure a sufficient livelihood in New Halfa and found their lives irreversibly altered. Although the resettlement of the Nubians did not succeed in rooting them in their new territory and a lot of the Halfawi Nubians have since abandoned the scheme, New Halfa has also created unforeseen opportunities for internally displaced people and migrant workers and become a growing regional centre for business and commerce.

Base de dados

Historical Newspapers From Around The Globe

The World Newspaper Archive, a partnership of CRL member libraries and Readex (a division of NewsBank), has reached a milestone of 2,500,000 scanned pages across the four available modules. Member investment in this successful collaborative digitization program has enabled CRL and Readex to make 300,000 issues from more than 200 newspapers widely available electronically.

A uniquely comprehensive collection spanning four continents. Representing the largest fully searchable collection of historical newspapers from around the globe, the World Newspaper Archive will advance research and offer opportunities for fresh insight across wide-ranging academic disciplines. This expanding online resource was created in partnership between Readex, a division of NewsBank, and the Center for Research Libraries (CRL)—one of the world's largest and most important newspaper repositories—and includes historical newspapers published in Africa, Latin America, South Asia and other regions.

African Newspapers, 1800-1922

Explore the issues and events that shaped the continent. This groundbreaking online collection provides more than 40 fully searchable African newspapers published in the 19th and 20th centuries. Featuring English- and foreign-language titles from Ghana, Guinea-Bissau, Kenya, Lesotho, Liberia, Madagascar, Malawi, Mozambique, Namibia, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Uganda and Zimbabwe, African Newspapers offers unparalleled coverage of the issues and events that shaped the continent and its peoples between 1800 and 1922.

Latin American Newspapers, 1805-1922

Latin American culture and daily life over two centuries. This groundbreaking online collection provides more than 45 fully searchable Latin American newspapers published in the 19th and early 20th centuries.

Featuring titles from Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Cuba, Guatemala, Mexico, Peru, Venezuela and elsewhere, Latin American Newspapers, 1805-1922,
