International Conference “Local Government and Urban Governance: Citizen Responsive Innovations in Europe and in Africa”, University of Lisbon, Portugal

The 2015 Annual Conference of the IGU Commission on ‘Geography of Governance’ (IGU-GoG), to be held in Lisbon at the Institute of Geography and Spatial Planning – University of Lisbon, aims to explore recent developments in local government and urban governance in Europe and in Africa, challenges and opportunities confronting local government, and the recent reforms and institutional experiments on both continents.

The conference is opened to participants coming from all around the world although we aim to focus mainly on Europe and Africa.

We welcome both country reports and international comparisons on the new challenges and opportunities confronting local government, in particular in Europe and in Africa.

IGOT

Instituto de Geografia e
Ordenamento do Território

The conference is organized in panels according to topics and issues. We welcome proposals for papers on any aspect of the broad area of local /urban governance, but would particularly encourage papers on three main themes:

- Theme 1 - Local Government and Urban Governance in Europe: the impact of austerity, recent reforms and the role of local government in an ‘EU Urban Agenda’.
- Theme 2 - Local Government and Urban Governance in Africa: democratic decentralization, good governance and the role of local government in the ‘Post-2015 Agenda’.
- Theme 3 – The use of ICT to expand the role of citizens in Urban Governance: national cases and international comparisons.

Participation in the Conference & Selection criteria

Participation in the conference requires the presentation of a paper. The working language of the conference will be English. All submissions will be peer-reviewed for content and appropriateness to this conference. Information on registration will be available soon in the conference website.

If necessary, contact us to discuss any ideas that you might have for a paper on these or on other related issues, even if with a focus outside Europe or Africa.

Conference “New Political Topographies: Trans-boundary Flows, Power and Legitimation in Africa and Beyond”, University of Edinburgh

This conference examines how the proliferation of new political actors and/or new modes of political action have affected political order in Africa and beyond.

It explores how new trans-boundary connections, particularly those related to transnational, corporate, non-governmental (NGOs) and para-statal actors, shape political topographies: What new topographies of power and authority have they cultivated at local, national and transnational levels? How ‘new’ are these developments in practice? How is legitimacy constructed and contested under these conditions? How do these developments shape our understanding about statehood in ‘most of the world’ (Chatterjee 2004)?

The vibrant debates that surround new political topographies in Africa are the springboard for this workshop.

We will be building on explorations of re-spacing, authority and governance beyond the state in Africa and relate it to cutting-edge work on transnationalised sites in a range of other regional contexts.

We will also engage with new work in international political sociology and geography tackling method(ologies) for mapping emerging political topographies.

Together, these various strands provide the basis for thinking through new political topographies from Africa/’most of the world’ and the implications of such thinking for a better understanding to the future of global politics.

CAAS Annual Congress “Ideas on Africa”, The Canadian Association of African Studies, University of Ottawa

With the independence of African states in the 1950s and 1960s the idea of freedom was paramount.

The oppression of slavery, indentured labor, colonial rule and violence, was now transcended by the freedom of independence, still denied Africans under apartheid in South Africa and under Segregation in Rhodesia.

“When I talk of freedom and independence for Africa,” Nkrumah declared, “I mean that the vast African majority should be accepted as forming the basis of government in Africa”.

Writers such as Mudimbe (The Invention of Africa), Eric Hobsbawm & Terrence Ranger (The Invention of Tradition) and Edward Said (Orientalism) privilege ideas as social constructivism.

CAAS 2015 focuses on the Ideas on Africa, on the African state, on development, on Africa’s place in the international community, of freedom in the postcolonial world. Ideas on Africa will thus seek to scrutinize the (self) representation of Africa between interventions and engagements, with a special emphasis on the crisis on the postcolonial nationhood or citizenship, as well as issues ranging from democracy to Human Rights, in order to better understand the modalities surrounding ideas on Africa, both from within the continent and beyond.

The organizing committee, the Executive Committee of the association, and all of its members look forward to welcoming you to University of Ottawa in June 2015.

CFP: Decolonisation and Post-Colonial Legacies, University of London, UK

The implications of their imperial pasts continue to affect the contemporary internal and external policies of six European Union member states (France, the UK, Portugal, Belgium, The Netherlands and Spain).

These connected, entangled historical legacies manifest themselves most obviously in the diverse diplomatic associations which draw together countries formerly colonised by these states: La Francophonie, the Commonwealth, the Comunidade dos Países de Língua Portuguesa and the Cumbre Ibero-Americana; but all six European states maintain varying institutional links.

A comparative analysis of these institutions is timely, as that there has been too little integrated, policy-relevant academic research into the ways in which European policy makers continue to contend with the enduring legacies of the process of decolonization.

The conference will focus on the complex web of post-imperial legacies for these EU countries and their societies, in terms of political institutions, immigration and community relations, trade, investment and aid, culture and education.

It is intended to highlight new research on critical process of transition for these former imperial powers, as well as to bring historians, political scientists and others.

LASO Panel and Roundtable/ ASA 2015, San Diego

The Lusophone African Studies Organization (LASO) is accepting panel and roundtable proposals for the 58th Annual Meeting of the African Studies Association (ASA). The theme for this year's conference is "The State and Study of Africa."

LASO is entitled to sponsor one panel and one roundtable which is guaranteed acceptance by the ASA program committee. We may also be able to assist in forming further panels, though we are not allowed to sponsor more than one. LASO encourages panels that are thematically or theoretically driven and that include research on more than one Lusophone African country.

Proposals should be sent by the email indicated below to Drew Thompson, coordinator of panel submissions for LASO, no later than Monday, March 2, 2015.

Proposals should be submitted as a Word attachment. Panel proposals should include an abstract from each of the proposed participants as well as a panel abstract.

Please note that African Studies Association membership is required in order to submit a proposal.

A New Scramble for Africa? The Rush for Energy Resources in Sub-Saharan Africa

Global energy consumption will increase rapidly in the next decades. The discrepancy between demand and supply is worrisome within the old and new cores of the world-economy. Sub-Saharan Africa meanwhile possesses vast potential for energy resources to be further exploited.

Whilst the Global North is a traditional player in the sub-Saharan energy sector, new actors from emerging economies - especially China's state-owned enterprises but also Brazilian, Indian and South African giants - have entered what appears to be a scramble for the largely untapped energy resources of the region. This book is the first to bring together comparative perspectives on:

This book also advances a materialist approach applicable in geographical and political-scientific research, showing that much insight can be gained by concentrating on the material environment that shapes economic and political phenomena.

Comparative Health Law and Policy

Health law and policy in Nigeria is an evolving and complex field of law, spanning a broad legal landscape and drawn from various sources. In addressing and interacting with these sources the volume advances research on health care law and policy in Nigeria and spells the beginning of what may now be formally termed the 'Nigerian health law and policy' legal field.

The collection provides a comparative analysis of relevant health policies and laws, such as reproductive and sexual health policy, organ donation and transplantation, abortion and assisted conception, with those in the United Kingdom, United States, Canada and South Africa. It critically examines the duties and rights of physicians, patients, health institutions and organizations, and government parastatals against the backdrop of increased awareness of rights among patient populations. The subjects, which are discussed from a legal, ethical and policy-reform perspective, critique current legislation and policies and make suggestions for reform.

Ethnicity, Democracy and Citizenship in Africa

As an ethnic minority the Nubians of Kenya are struggling for equal citizenship by asserting themselves as indigenous and autochthonous to Kibera, one of Nairobi's most notorious slums. Having settled there after being brought by the British colonial authorities from Sudan as soldiers, this appears a peculiar claim to make.

It is a claim that illuminates the hierarchical nature of Kenya's ethnicised citizenship regime and the multifaceted nature of citizenship itself. This book explores two kinds of citizenship deficits; those experienced by the Nubians in Kenya and, more centrally, those which represent the limits of citizenship theories.

The author argues for an understanding of citizenship as made up of multiple component parts: status, rights and membership, which are often disaggregated through time, across geographic spaces and amongst different people.

The Postcolonial Intellectual. Ngu-gu-wa Thiong'o in Context

Addressing a neglected dimension in postcolonial scholarship, Oliver Lovesey examines the figure of the postcolonial intellectual as repeatedly evoked by the fabled troika of Said, Spivak, and Bhabha and by members of the pan-African diaspora such as Cabral, Fanon, and James. Lovesey's primary focus is Ngu-gu-wa Thiong'o, one of the greatest writers of post-independence Africa.

Ngu-gu- continues to be a vibrant cultural agitator and innovator who, in contrast to many other public intellectuals, has participated directly in grassroots cultural renewal, enduring imprisonment and exile as a consequence of his engagement in political action. Lovesey's comprehensive study concentrates on Ngu-gu-'s non-fictional prose writings, including his largely overlooked early journalism and his most recent autobiographical and theoretical work.

Witchcraft, Witches, and Violence in Ghana

Witchcraft violence is a feature of many contemporary African societies. In Ghana, belief in witchcraft and the malignant activities of putative witches is prevalent; purported witches are blamed for all manner of adversities including inexplicable illnesses and untimely deaths.

As in other historical periods and other societies, in contemporary Ghana, alleged witches are typically female, elderly, poor and marginalized. Childhood socialization in homes and schools, exposure to mass media, and other institutional mechanisms ensure that witchcraft beliefs are transmitted across generations and entrenched over time.

This book provides a detailed account of Ghanaian witchcraft beliefs and practices and their role in fueling violent attacks by aggrieved individuals and vigilante groups on these alleged witches.

Architecture in Black

Based on analysis of historical, philosophical, and semiotic texts, Architecture in Black presents a systematic examination of the theoretical relationship between architecture and blackness. Now updated, this original study draws on a wider range of case studies, highlighting the racial techniques that can legitimize modern historicity, philosophy and architectural theory.

Arguing that architecture, as an aesthetic practice, and blackness, as a linguistic practice, operate within the same semiotic paradigm, Darell Fields employs a technique whereby works are related through the repetition and revision of their semiotic structures.

Combining an historical survey of racial discourse with new readings resulting from advanced semiotic techniques doubling as spatial arrangements, Architecture in Black is an important contribution to studies of the racial in Western thought and its impact on architecture, space and time.

Black Shame

Black Shame offers a detailed analysis of the recruitment and deployment of – and reactions to – African soldiers in the WWI European theatre of war.

In so doing, the book paints a vivid picture of the wider debates of race and national identity provoked by the use of African troops within the main actors on the WWI scene: France, Britain, Germany and even the US. Drawing on war-time attitudes, Dick van Galen Last explores the reality and long-term consequences of the participation of African regiments in the post-war occupation of the German territories.

Wide-ranging, both geographically and thematically, the first publication of its kind, Black Shame adds a fresh, truly comparative perspective to the scholarship in the fields of imperial and military history, as well as war studies and postcolonial studies, and will appeal to academics and postgraduate students alike.

Civil Uprisings in Modern Sudan

In the wake of the protests that toppled regimes across the Middle East in 2011, Sudanese activists and writers have proudly cited their very own ‘Arab Springs’ of 1964 and 1985, which overthrew the country’s first two military regimes, as evidence of their role as political pioneers in the region. Whilst some of these claims may be exaggerated, Sudan was indeed unique in the region at the time in that it witnessed not one but two popular uprisings which successfully uprooted military authoritarianisms.

Civil Uprisings in Modern Sudan provides the first scholarly book-length history of the 1964 and 1985 uprisings. It explores the uprisings themselves, their legacy and the contemporary relevance they hold in the context of the current political climate of the Middle East. The book also contends that the sort of politics espoused by various kinds of Islamist during the uprisings can be interpreted as a form of early ‘post-Islamism’, in which Islamist political agendas were seen to be compatible with liberalism and democracy.

The Black Pacific. Anti-Colonial Struggles and Oceanic Connections

Why have the struggles of the African Diaspora so resonated with South Pacific people? How have Maori, Pasifika and Pakeha activists incorporated the ideologies of the African diaspora into their struggle against colonial rule and racism, and their pursuit of social justice?

This book challenges predominant understandings of the historical linkages that make up the (post-) colonial world. The author goes beyond both the domination of the Atlantic viewpoint, and the correctives now being offered by South Pacific and Indian Ocean studies, to look at how the Atlantic ecumene is refracted in and has influenced the Pacific ecumene. The book is empirically rich, using extensive interviews, participation and archival work and focusing on the politics of Black Power and the Rastafari faith. It is also theoretically sophisticated, offering an innovative hermeneutical critique of post-colonial and subaltern studies.

Sex, Power and Slavery

Sexual exploitation was and is a critical feature of enslavement. Across many different societies, slaves were considered to own neither their bodies nor their children, even if many struggled to resist. At the same time, paradoxes abound: for example, in some societies to bear the children of a master was a potential route to manumission for some women.

Sex, Power, and Slavery is the first history of slavery and bondage to take sexuality seriously. Twenty-six authors from diverse scholarly backgrounds look at the vexed, traumatic intersections of the histories of slavery and of sexuality. They argue that such intersections mattered profoundly and, indeed, that slavery cannot be understood without adequate attention to sexuality. Sex, Power, and Slavery brings into conversation historians of the slave trade, art historians, and scholars of childhood and contemporary sex trafficking. The book merges work on the Atlantic world and the Indian Ocean world and enables rich comparisons and parallels between these diverse areas.

The Libyan Revolution and its Aftermath

This book offers a novel, incisive and wide-ranging account of Libya's '17 February Revolution' by tracing how critical towns, communities and political groups helped to shape its course. Each community, whether geographical (e.g. Misrata, Zintan), tribal/comunal (e.g. Beni Walid) or political (e.g. the Muslim Brotherhood) took its own path into the uprisings and subsequent conflict of 2011, according to their own histories and relationship to Muammar Gaddafi's regime.

The story of each group is told by the authors, based on reportage and expert analysis, from the outbreak of protests in Benghazi in February 2011 through to the transitional period following the end of fighting in October 2011. They describe the emergence of Libya's new politics through the unique stories of those who made it happen, or those who fought against it.

Travels in West Africa

Until 1893, Mary Kingsley lived the typical life of a single Victorian woman, tending to sick relatives and keeping house for her brother. However, on the death of her parents, she undertook an extraordinary decision: with no prior knowledge of the region, she set out alone to West Africa to pursue her anthropological interests and collect botanical specimens. Her subsequent book, published in 1897, is a testament to understatement and humour - few explorers made less of the hardships and dangers experienced while travelling (including unaccompanied treks through dangerous jungles and encounters with deadly animals).

Travels in West Africa would challenge (as well as reinforce) contemporary Victorian prejudices about Africa, and also made invaluable contributions to the fields of botany and anthropology. Above all, however, it has stood the test of time as a gripping, classic travel narrative by a woman whose sense of adventure and fascination with Africa transformed her whole life.

Mozambique: Documentaries

Fascinating interview with Van Lierop (conducted by William Minter): New York | April 16, 2004. Organization: Africa Information Service. Mozambique Film Project.

A lawyer, filmmaker and long-time activist. Robert Van Lierop made two films on Mozambique, A Luta Continua (1972), filmed in the liberated areas during the struggle for independence, and O Povo Organizado (1976), filmed shortly after independence.

Van Lierop discusses the Mozambique Liberation Front (Frelimo) and Frelimo leaders Eduardo Mondlane, Shafrudin Khan, Joaquim Chissano, Valeriano Ferrao, and Armando Guebuza. Van Lierop says A Luta Continua was smuggled into South Africa and shown by the Black Consciousness Movement and others before the 1976 Soweto uprising. He says Frelimo also smuggled this film into Portugal.

Van Lierop discusses the Mozambique Film Project, Africa Information Service (AIS), American Committee on Africa, African Liberation Support Committee (ALSC), Southern Africa Committee, the NAACP, Bob Brown and the Black Economic Research Center, and Heywood Burns and the National Conference of Black Lawyers. Van Lierop also discusses José Ramos Horta, Tapson Mawere and ZANU, UNITA, and the MPLA.

This interview was conducted as research for the book No Easy Victories: African Liberation and American Activists over a Half Century, 1950-2000. With assistance of Aluka (aluka.org), the interview was transcribed and prepared for presentation on the web. The transcript was reviewed by the interviewee, and an introduction was prepared by one of the editors of No Easy Victories. The transcript also is available on the No Easy Victories website [<http://www.noeasyvictories.org>].
